

Children, Migration and Transnational Childhoods

Single subject and programme course

7.5 credits

Children, Migration and Transnational Childhoods

736A34

Valid from: 2014 Autumn semester

Determined by

The Quality Board at the Faculty of Arts and Sciences

Date determined

2015-04-17

Main field of study

Child Studies

Course level

Second cycle

Advancement level

A1X

Course offered for

- Master's Programme in Child Studies

Entry requirements

A bachelor's degree in the humanities, social sciences or the behavioral sciences with a major (or its equivalent) in a field relevant to the programme, e.g. anthropology, communication studies, education, history, language studies, media studies, political science, psychology, social work and sociology. Successfully completed 45 credits of the first year's courses on the Master's program in Child studies. Documented knowledge of English equivalent to "Engelska B"/"Engelska 6".

Intended learning outcomes

After completion of the course, the student should on an advanced level be able to:

- describe the migration processes and transnational childhoods in a globalized world;
- identify and critically discuss different theoretical perspectives concerning international migration and global movement;
- account for and critically review current research on children's experiences of migration and being a refugee;
- problematize childhood and migration in relation to political processes.

Course content

The course deals with children, childhood and migration processes in a globalized world. Theoretical perspectives on both forced and voluntary migration are studied with a focus on families' and children's strategies. In one course module children's situation and what they have experienced during the migration process, with a specific emphasis on family life and kinship relations is particularly focused on. In another part of the course refugee children and citizenship seen in relation to borders, migration policy and the Convention on the Rights of the Child are studied more closely.

Teaching and working methods

Lectures and related discussions take place online on an interactive learning platform. In addition to lectures there are seminars and group work online. Between the lectures and the seminars the students independently acquire the course literature, complete individual and group assignments, and communicate with other students online.

The student must have access to e-mail and Internet. The course is presented in various multi-media formats. In order to guarantee a learning situation online, and, in order for the student to be able to actively participate in the course and communicate with fellow students and the teacher, it is therefore important that the student have access to the correct hard- and software. Information concerning the specifications of the equipment necessary for the course can be found in the study guide.

English is the language of instruction.

Examination

The examinations consist of active participation in seminars and group assignments online, as well as through individual written assignments submitted online. Detailed information on the examinations can be found in the study guide.

Students failing an exam covering either the entire course or part of the course twice are entitled to have a new examiner appointed for the reexamination.

Students who have passed an examination may not retake it in order to improve their grades.

Grades

ECTS, EC

Other information

Planning and implementation of a course must take its starting point in the wording of the syllabus. The course evaluation included in each course must therefore take up the question how well the course agrees with the syllabus.

The course is carried out in such a way that both men's and women's experience and knowledge is made visible and developed.

Department

Institutionen för Tema