- formulate research problems
- use methodological competence – mainly text analysis -within the framework of the course

Course content

The course treats negotiation and conflict in a national and international perspective. The basic concepts are scrutinised and theoretical perspectives from different fields of research are introduced and discussed. Within the frames of international relations historical and contemporary prerequisites for war but also consensus and cooperation are discussed. The questions of the course emanate from the relation between development on the national and international level where Swedish processes are related to a global perspective. Comprehensive tendencies in contemporary international and Swedish development are analysed, for instance in terms of national and ethnic conflict.

Teaching and working methods

The teaching is based on student active workforms. Lectures, individual and groupwise practices and supervision are the dominating forms of teaching. If international exchange students participate in the course, lectures and some seminars are given in English. Undervisning sker därmed exempelvis genom föreläsningar, individuella och gruppvisa övningar samt handledning.

Examination

Examinations are both oral and written. Oral examination in presentations of group examination assignments and participating in discussions. Written examination by both individual and group assignments. The course is examined in several parts, to pass the course the students have to pass all these parts.

If special circumstances prevail, and if it is possible with consideration of the nature of the compulsory component, the examiner may decide to replace the compulsory component with another equivalent component.

If the LiU coordinator for students with disabilities has granted a student the right to an adapted examination for a written examination in an examination hall, the student has the right to it.

If the coordinator has recommended for the student an adapted examination or alternative form of examination, the examiner may grant this if the examiner assesses that it is possible, based on consideration of the course objectives.

An examiner may also decide that an adapted examination or alternative form of examination if the examiner assessed that special circumstances prevail, and the examiner assesses that it is possible while maintaining the objectives of the course.

Students failing an exam covering either the entire course or part of the course twice are entitled to have a new examiner appointed for the reexamination.

Students who have passed an examination may not retake it in order to improve their grades.
