Course content

The thesis work means an advanced study of subject-related methodological and theoretical knowledge. The subject of the thesis is chosen in consultation with the supervisor and should be within the scope of relevant areas of knowledge. The choice can also be based on external investigation and evaluation assignments.

Teaching and working methods

The teaching is based on student active working methods. Teaching mainly takes the form of individual supervision or in groups.

Examination

The course is examined in several parts. The examinations are both in oral and written form. The written examination comprises the thesis work. Oral examination takes place through defence of the own thesis work and review of another essay, as well as participation in at least one more examination seminar. A passing grade in all these parts is required to pass.

If special circumstances prevail, and if it is possible with consideration of the nature of the compulsory component, the examiner may decide to replace the compulsory component with another equivalent component.

If the LiU coordinator for students with disabilities has granted a student the right to an adapted examination for a written examination in an examination hall, the student has the right to it.

If the coordinator has recommended for the student an adapted examination or alternative form of examination, the examiner may grant this if the examiner assesses that it is possible, based on consideration of the course objectives.

An examiner may also decide that an adapted examination or alternative form of examination if the examiner assessed that special circumstances prevail, and the examiner assesses that it is possible while maintaining the objectives of the course.

Students failing an exam covering either the entire course or part of the course twice are entitled to have a new examiner appointed for the reexamination.

Students who have passed an examination may not retake it in order to improve their grades.

Grades

Three-grade scale, U, G, VG

Other information

Planning and implementation of a course must take its starting point in the wording of the syllabus. The course evaluation included in each course must therefore take up the question how well the course agrees with the syllabus.

The course is conducted in such a way that there are equal opportunities with regard to sex, transgender identity or expression, ethnicity, religion or other belief, disability, sexual orientation and age.

If special circumstances prevail, the vice-chancellor may in a special decision specify the preconditions for temporary deviations from this course syllabus, and delegate the right to take such decisions.
