Course content

In the course, an independent research project is conducted. This involves independently designing and executing a scientific investigation as well as formulating a relevant research question within the subject of ethnicity and migration. Furthermore, it includes processing extensive theoretical and empirical material.

Teaching and working methods

The course contains thesis work, seminars, and supervision. In addition to this, the student is expected to engage in self-studies.

Examination

The course is examined through:

- Individual written master's thesis, grade: EC
- Individual oral presentation of own thesis, grade: P/F (pass/fail)
- Individual oral opposition, grade: P/F (pass/fail)
- Active participation in seminars, grade: P/F (pass/fail)

To receive a passing (E) grade, a minimum of E is required on the individual written master's thesis, along with a pass on the other components. Higher grades are based on the individual written master's thesis.

If special circumstances prevail, and if it is possible with consideration of the nature of the compulsory component, the examiner may decide to replace the compulsory component with another equivalent component.

If the LiU coordinator for students with disabilities has granted a student the right to an adapted examination for a written examination in an examination hall, the student has the right to it.

If the coordinator has recommended for the student an adapted examination or alternative form of examination, the examiner may grant this if the examiner assesses that it is possible, based on consideration of the course objectives.

An examiner may also decide that an adapted examination or alternative form of examination if the examiner assessed that special circumstances prevail, and the examiner assesses that it is possible while maintaining the objectives of the course.

Students failing an exam covering either the entire course or part of the course twice are entitled to have a new examiner appointed for the reexamination.

Students who have passed an examination may not retake it in order to improve their grades.

Other information

Planning and implementation of a course must take its starting point in the wording of the syllabus. The course evaluation included in each course must therefore take up the question how well the course agrees with the syllabus.

The course is conducted in such a way that there are equal opportunities with regard to sex, transgender identity or expression, ethnicity, religion or other belief, disability, sexual orientation and age.

If special circumstances prevail, the vice-chancellor may in a special decision specify the preconditions for temporary deviations from this course syllabus, and delegate the right to take such decisions.
