- account for the role of marketing in a cultural activity
- plan and carry out campaigns for chosen target groups
- account for basic legislation concerning intellectual property rights, particularly concerning trademarks and copyright

Course content

The course intends to provide general knowledge of project methodology, the role of the project manager, different organisational charts for presentation, operation and follow up of projects.

The course covers entrepreneurship in the cultural field, where, for example, market communication, marketing and intellectual property rights within law are included.

Teaching and working methods

The working methods are varying, student active and project-based, and are completed with a presentation of a project idea and a presentation of a simple profile and marketing material. In the course, tools of the social web are used consistently, including process documents, project sites, blogs and social networks.

Each subpart is preceded by a lecture that the students follow up through project work. The students are encouraged to direct their project work, business plans, profiling programmes, campaign planning, or the like towards actual customers or own realistic future projects. The students have access to supervision from teacher during the entire course. In addition to this, the student should study independently.

Examination

The business plans/projects are examined either through a seminar that is preceded by a written assignment or via the implementation of project. Detailed information about the form and contents of the examination can be found in the study guide for the course.

If the LiU coordinator for students with disabilities has granted a student the right to an adapted examination for a written examination in an examination hall, the student has the right to it. If the coordinator has instead recommended for the student an adapted examination or alternative form of examination, the examiner may grant this if the examiner assesses that it is possible, based on consideration of the course objectives.

Students failing an exam covering either the entire course or part of the course twice are entitled to have a new examiner appointed for the reexamination.

Students who have passed an examination may not retake it in order to improve their grades.

Grades

Three-grade scale, U, G, VG
